Kendall started off with an encouraging opening game during his D-league stint with the Jam but after four games we're getting a better picture of where he is and frankly, it's both not surprising and not encouraging.

Of course, I've not watched a single one of these games so if you have and think these numbers aren't telling the story, speak up.

MPG - 32.8

PPG - 10.8

FGA - 12.75

FG% - 32.8%

3P% - 16.7% (!)

APG - 6.8

TO - 3.75

So basically, these numbers paint the picture of a guy who's trying to get up shots but has a long way to go before breaking out of being a pass-only one dimensionally player.

If you are so inclined, here's a photo gallery of Marshall in his Jam kit (kit is English for clothes).
