

Phoenix Suns' Alex Len Out With Broken Finger For Rest Of Summer League

Written by
Sunday, 13 July 2014 12:48 -

---

Alex Len has reportedly been ruled out for playing in the rest of the Summer League for the Suns.

After an impressive debut, Alex Len, the Suns' 7' 1" big man has reportedly been ruled out for the rest of the Phoenix Suns' Summer League games, due to a broken pinky that he sustained during the game when it got caught in another player's jersey.

A broken right pinky finger will sideline #Suns center Alex Len for the remainder of NBA Summer League. <http://t.co/AqsBXw1P30>

— Paul Coro (@paulcoro) July 13, 2014

This is a tough break for Len, the Suns, and the fans alike who were all anxious to see Alex play after also missing last year's Summer League due to surgeries on both of his ankles.

Len scored 6 points on 3-7 shooting, grabbed 6 rebounds, and also registered two blocks in what looks to be his first and final Summer League game of this season.